

BRANDVAL ON JULY 17, 2014

Per and Venche Skogrand had invited us to the cabin they have in Brandval. They wanted to give us a tour of the west side where Martinus Sørli lived. Both Anne Berit and Per are related to him.

Here we are at Sørli.

View downwards.

The barn.

This is the old house. It is no longer here.

Link

We then drove down to Agnåa. It is a 25 km long tributary to Glomma. Here, in the 17th century, a logging dam and later a mill and a sawmill were built.

This is the dam. It is about 100 m long with two dam hatches, two floodgates, a bottom hatch and a float channel. It has been well maintained.

This is a view up the river.

Above the dam.

One of the dam hatches.

Below the dam.

Part of the dam seen from below.

This foundation remains.

The water trough.

The troug goes down here.

The water wheel.

The saw.

The mill.

Under the mill

Drive mechanism for the saw.

Then we were at the cabin.

On the veranda.

View towards Agnåa.

