

Day 10, June 8, the trip went from Salt Lake City to Cheyenne. Here we come to the ski jumps where the Winter Olympics were held in 2002. These are the smallest jumps.

This is a shop and a museum. Alf Engen ski museum is located here.

Banners

Alf Engen and S. Joseph «Joe» Quinney.

Freestyle hills. They were used as training hills when we were there.

These are the two main hills.

On the road further east, we had a toilet break. Here Buffalo Child found out that it was OK to perform a ceremony here, where everyone has the chance to ask questions. To participate, you have to give tobacco to Buffalo. He also had with him a ceremonial pipe.

Those who would be part of this had to sit in a circle. They were not allowed to have watches, cell phones or camera with them, and they had to sit quietly during the ceremony.

Further eastwards the countryside look like this.

We had lunch in Rock Springs in a restaurant called Golden Corral. It is a nationwide chain. There was lunch buffet here.

This is outside the restaurant.

This is a normal trailer.

Here all get a picture of Buffalo Child.

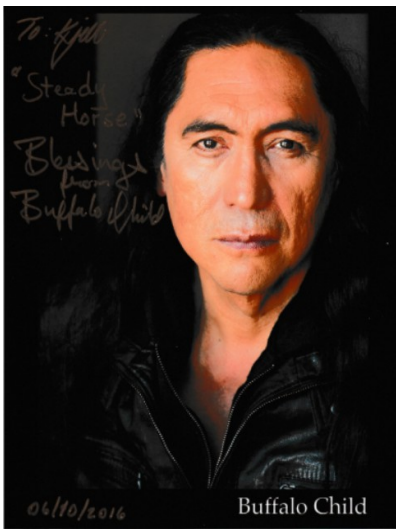

He had promised during the whole trip that everyone would get a provisional Indian name.

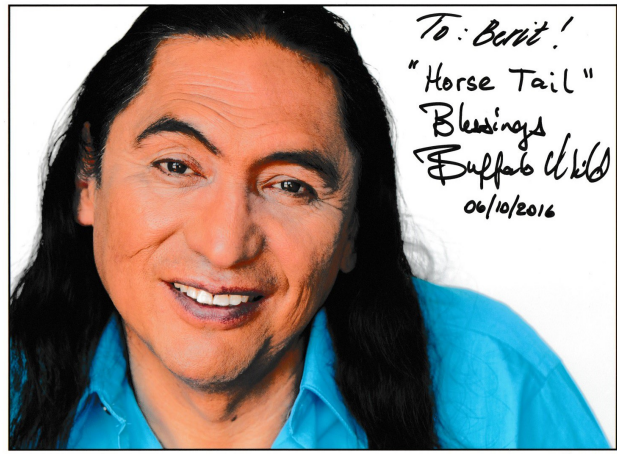

Here we got the photos eventually.

I got the name «Steady Horse».

Buffalo Child

Anne Berit got the name «Horse Tail».

This time we stayed in Cheyenne in hotel called Holiday Inn.

Cheyenne is the capital of Wyoming. The hotel is located on the edge of town.

Day 11, June 9, it return day. Here we come to Denver again, before heading out to the airport.

Those who wanted to, could do the last shopping.

We ate some lunch and watched the kids playing in the fountains.

Then it is just before the bus arrives.

Then on the plain back to Gardermoen via Reykjavik.
